LEADERSHIP TEAMS: WHY THEY SUCCEED OR FAIL

Why do so many teams fail to live up to their promise?

Because of the obstinate belief that human beings are rational entities. And because team designer's fail to take into account the subtle, unconscious dynamics that influence human behaviour.

During the two-day Workshop for "Leadership Teams: why they succeed or fail" participants will actively explore the following

Learning objectives:

- Introduction to the life of groups and teams: How a group becomes a team?
- What makes teams effective?
- Creating authentic structure of the team: composition of the team, size of the team and designing a team
- Team leadership: leadership strategies, structures, and skills required to lead teams.

Take away:

- 👉 R. Meredith Belbin "Team role assessment "
- 👉 Patrick Lencioni "5 Dysfunctions of the Team"

Through a participative process and a problem-solving framework that includes in-class case analysis, small group discussion, creative learning activities participants have the opportunity to:

- ✅ Develop strong and sustainable leadership and team-building capabilities
- ✅ Experience the not-so-secret steps which take a team to the highest level
- ✅ Learn how to harness individual and team strengths across the enterprise.
